

The Testimony Of Ancient Stones

Where were you when the lightning struck
And the blue sky turned to darkness
All their lies befell on us
'Cause the path they led was hopeless

Where were you

This story found in ancient stones
It shall not remain untold
'Cause we lost, we lost what once we owned
But we fought against their deadly hold

Where were you when the thunder roared
And the ones who fell were buried
All our cries upon the sword
For the demons showed no mercy
Where were you when the evil came
And our way of life was over
So much blood upon the floor
As we watched our kind get slaughtered

Where were you

This story found in ancient stones
It shall not remain untold
'Cause we lost, we lost what once we owned
But we fought against their deadly hold
These events forever known
Passed down since the days of old
Yes we lost, we lost what once we owned
But we fought against their shackle hold
With bludgeoned skin and broken bones

Now unto the old
And so here we go
Now unto the old
And so here we go
